Your Airlie Gardens wedding.

A little planning help from Glenn Guiao.

Start with the kind of celebration you want.

The venue lists the Oak Lawn and Pergola Garden for ceremonies, and Bradley Creek Lawn for ceremonies or receptions. Confirm your event location, access window and weather arrangements directly with Airlie before building the timeline.

A small elopement works differently.

Airlie’s published small-elopement option is limited to 10 people total, including the couple, officiant and photographer. It does not allow rentals, decorations or other vendors. The vendor ideas on page two are for discussing a larger wedding, not permission to add vendors to an elopement.

Check Airlie’s current event options and arrange a tour

Think about the photographs before filling every minute.

In my Airlie gallery, Madison and Chris moved between the Oak Lawn, pergola and Spring Garden during a short morning visit. That is a real wedding example, not a timetable or access promise for yours. Tell me which settings matter most so we can prioritize a manageable route.

Bring a short family grouping list. Agree on who gathers people, leave room for walking, and ask your planner where portraits fit around the ceremony and reception. A portrait session has its own permission requirements; ordinary garden admission is not a booking.

These businesses are credited in Knot Too Shabby Events' published Airlie wedding stories. They are not presented as Airlie-approved vendors or as my past collaborators. Ask Airlie about current requirements, then ask each business about your date, services and availability.

Before you book a team

Ask about setup and breakdown access, power, sound, tenting, insurance, catering arrangements and the weather plan. Have your venue and planner confirm what applies to your event rather than relying on an older wedding example.
